Biography of Jean-Michel Trogneux alias Brigitte Trogneux, wife Macron

Five months of citizen's investigation strewn with false leads and hesitations lead to a new understanding.

Here is the scenario that seems to us the closest to reality, given the state of our knowledge in mid-August 2022.

The concluding chapter 30 of the dossier presents the same scenario in more detail with links to the sources.

Compared to the version at the end of May, the 1974 marriage, which was fictitious and invented in 1984, has become effective.

1945, February 11. Jean-Michel Trogneux is born in Amiens. His parents, Jean Trogneux and Simone Pujol, are chocolate confectioners and belong to the Amiens bourgeoisie, having a villa in Le Touquet-Paris-Plage. He has an older brother and three older sisters.

1959. Brigitte Trogneux dies, at the age of 6, in difficult conditions (accident? long and painful illness?), so much so that this death is hidden by the family and is not declared to the registrar. Jean-Michel, about 14 years old, is very marked by this tragedy. The family makes believe that Brigitte is still alive.

1961. Perhaps to take him away from the scene of this misfortune, the Trogneux parents send their son Jean-Michel to continue his studies in Algiers. There he meets two other students. Jean-Louis Auzière, son and little brother of agents working for the French secret services, will be of great help to Jean-Michel. Jean-Marc Uhrweiller, is originally from the town of Truchtersheim in Alsace, we will come back to this.

1969. At the time of the Apollo XI lunar mission, Jean-Michel Trogneux, 24 years old, would be in the United States. We know very little about his school and university career. The Trogneux parents continue to make believe that their daughter Brigitte is alive, studying abroad with her big brother Jean-Michel.

1973. Jean-Louis Auzière and Jean-Michel Trogneux stayed in touch. Laure Auzière, a niece of Jean-Louis, is studying in Amiens. A love encounter brought Jean-Michel and Brigitte Auzière, Laure's sister, together. At the same time, Jean-Michel's parents own a piece of land with a house and a warehouse in the town of Blangy-Tronville, about ten kilometers from Amiens. They installed Jean-Michel there for a hardware store project, "Picardie Métal", with a representative. Jean-Michel is the manager. We do not know if he had other activities at the same time.

1974. The Trogneux parents want to show that their daughter Brigitte is still alive. Jean-Michel does not want to marry Brigitte Auzière, who does. To solve all this, with the help of Jean-Louis Auzière, a fictitious marriage of the deceased Brigitte is made. The imagined husband is called André Louis Auzière. He is both a double of Jean-Louis (who likes to be called André, his middle name) and a double of Brigitte née Auzière since he has her dates and places of birth, in Cameroon, and since he is also a child of Louis Auzière, Jean-Louis' brother. The mayor of Le Touquet, a great friend of the Trogneux parents, provided his indispensable assistance so that the legality was apparently respected. A fake photo of the wedding was published in "Les Echos du Touquet". Thus the parents continue to make believe that their daughter is alive and Brigitte Auzière makes believe that Jean-Michel is her husband when he comes to see her.

1975. The first child of Jean-Michel Trogneux and Brigitte Auzière was born in Amiens, while his mother lived in Issy-les-Moulineaux and his father in Blangy-Tronville. The child is named Sébastien Auzière, from the name of his fictitious father, if André Louis, the groom of 1974, is the declared father, or from his mother's name, if the father is not declared. The latter lives in Issy-les-Moulineaux, then in Croix, near Lille. Jean-Michel sometimes visits them. He is then supposed to be André Louis Auzière, as indicated on the doorbell, the mailbox and the telephone book (where the registration does not give rise to an identity check...). The Trogneux grandparents present the child as the son of their daughter Brigitte who is supposed to be still alive. Brigitte, born Auzière, plays the role of the deceased. Does she say she was born Trogneux? To what extent is the double identity of the parents used? To the point of having, for each of them, two identity cards?

1977. Jean-Michel Trogneux, still in Blangy-Tronville, and Brigitte Auzière, still in Croix, have a second child, a girl, Laurence. Like Sébastien, she was born in Amiens and her family name was Auzière. Jean-Michel Trogneux has a double life, transforming himself into a woman, probably with the accompaniment in Paris of the group of help to the transsexuals created by the Belgian pastor Joseph Doucé. On September 27, 1977, he is interviewed, in shaded mode, as being Véronique the transsexual. His voice, his tic of language "that is to say", his gestures are the same ones as those of Brigitte Macron in January 2022.

1980. Jean-Michel Trogneux, in addition to his double life man-woman, will lead a double family life. On November 24, 1980, he got married in Blangy-Tronville with Véronique Dreux. Brigitte Auzière, mother of his first two children, is witness. Her signature on the marriage certificate is the only trace we have of her (apart from her children...).

1982. The couple moved to Beauvais, Véronique Dreux owned a confectionery and haberdashery store called "Tentations". In 1982, the couple has a child, Jean-Jacques Trogneux, born in Amiens. For Jean-Michel's parents, this does not pose a problem since they present Sébastien and Laurence as children of the deceased Brigitte and Jean-Jacques as the child of their son Jean-Michel, who is supposed to have only one home. We do not know the profession exercised by Jean-Michel Trogneux. He probably continues his double life as a man/woman and continues to see his Auzière family, as if he were the fictitious husband André Louis Auzière.

1983. In 1983 Jean-Louis Auzière was appointed French Foreign Trade Adviser, a role with unclear contours in the tradition of his father Marius and his brother Louis, in the more or less secret service of France. He settled in Strasbourg. In the telephone directory, he refers to himself as André (also in Croix, as the pseudo husband of his niece...). He joins in Strasbourg, within the framework of his work, an old friend from Algiers, Jean-Marc Uhrweiller, commercial director of the autonomous port of this city since 1972, who still lives in Truchtersheim, near Strasbourg.

1984. Tiphaine Auzière, Brigitte Auzière and Jean-Michel's third child, was born on 30 January, in the same circumstances as her brother Sébastien and sister Laurence, in Amiens. Three weeks later, on February 20, Jean-Michel had another child, Valérie Trogneux, daughter of his wife Véronique Dreux and sister of Jean-Jacques. It is at this time that Brigitte Auzière, the mother of Sébastien, Laurence and Tiphaine seems to disappear. Did she die? Serious illness? Exfiltration under another identity? We don't know.

1985 (or 1984 or 1986...). While Brigitte Auzière, née Auzière, disappeared from Croix and elsewhere, a new Brigitte Auzière appeared in Alsace, in Truchtersheim ("Truch"). She was born Trogneux, she is the little sister of Jean-Michel who is back to life, 25 years after his death. As her death had not been declared, she has an identity card, a social security number, everything appears to be in order, including her 1974 marriage. In fact, Jean-Michel has decided to definitively abandon his complicated life of the last ten years. He chose his family: that of the three Auzière children, he left the other family of two children, starting with Véronique Dreux a divorce procedure, which will be signed on June 17, 1987. He definitively opts for the female sex and thus chooses, with the support of his friend Jean-Louis Auzière, to take the identity of his deceased sister Brigitte Trogneux, thus replacing, also, the missing Brigitte Auzière, born Auzière, mother of his children. The fictitious husband André Louis Auzière remains in place, allowing the continuity of the name "Brigitte Auzière" to the new spouse. Jean-Louis Auzière gives this husband more thickness. He is supposed to work as a banker, deputy director of the Strasbourg branch of the Banque Française du Commerce Extérieur (BFCE). Jean-Louis sometimes takes on this professional role and occasionally passes through Truch where he fills the role of the husband André Louis for the neighborhood. His wife Brigitte Auzière, born Trogneux, finds a job as a French teacher at the private high school "Lucie Berger" in Strasbourg.

1988. During a notary transaction, Jean Trogneux accompanies his daughter Brigitte. The Trogneux parents continue to support her, thirty years after her death. All the family accepted this reincarnation, the brothers and sisters first, the last ones are lured.

1989. Brigitte Auzière, born Trogneux, is now well integrated socially in Truch and Strasbourg. Her three children are growing up, her husband André is often absent, absorbed by his professional activities, he is there from time to time. Brigitte participates in a municipal election. Her list was not elected. In 1990, at the "Lucie Berger" high school, she obtains a CAPES equivalent of teacher of modern literature for private schools.

1991. After her success in Alsace, Brigitte returned to Amiens with her three children. Her fictitious husband André Auzière, who now works in Lille, is still absent from Amiens. She has a job as a French teacher at the college "La Providence". At the beginning of the 1992 school year, she leads a theater workshop there and meets a 14-year-old student, Emmanuel Macron, with whom she has a romantic relationship. The scandal breaks, Emmanuel must continue his studies in Paris. They continue to see each other.

2006. André Louis Auzière and Brigitte Trogneux divorce under the benevolence of the same mayor of Le Touquet as in 1974.

2007. In Le Touquet, the same mayor married Emmanuel Macron and Brigitte Trogneux, in fact Jean-Michel.

2017. Emmanuel Macron becomes President of the French Republic and Brigitte Macron, born Jean-Michel Trogneux, becomes "First Lady of France".
